Fig. 1. The participants on the bridge driving to the Department of Astronomy of the Padua University, which is located in between the medieval walls and the canal surrounding the center of Padua. The tower in the background was build by the tyrant Ezzelino III da Romano, who ruled the city in the first half of the thirteenth century. Since 1767 it hosts the headquarters of the Padua Astronomical Observatory.